Cops lay charges in retail robberies

Ottawa police have charged an Ottawa man following two retail robberies in the city's east end earlier this week.

Between 11 p.m. and midnight Tuesday, police responded to two robberies where a male had entered a store brandishing a handgun. An undisclosed amount of money, lotto tickets and cigarettes were taken.

Based on witness information, police stopped a vehicle, recovered property and charged a driver.

Nicholas Alswiti, 22, faces two counts each of robbery with a firearm, pointing a firearm, using a firearm during the commission of an offence and possession of weapons dangerous to the public and four counts of breach of undertaking.

In 1948, at the St. Moritz Winter Olympics, Scott became the first Canadian to win a figure skating gold medal. She was also awarded the Lou Marsh Trophy as Canada's top athlete of the year in 1945, 1947 and 1948. More Olympics coverage, page 20.

Clash in the Commons

Close vote forces Tories to release Afghan documents

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government has lost its iron grip on information about detainee treatment in Afghanistan after a showdown that pitted the power of the ruling party against the power of Parliament and the combined force of the opposition parties.

The Liberals narrowly pushed through a motion in the Commons Thursday that forces Harper's government to release waves of unedited documents so Parliament can examine whether Afghan prisoners detained by Canadian forces were subject to torture when handed over to local authorities, and what the government knew about the issue.

The motion passed with a vote of 145-143.

It's not clear how that information will be released in days ahead, or whether the government will continue to resist the documents' release.

2 The number of votes in the House that pushed through a motion to release unedited documents regarding Afghan prisoners detained by Canadian Forces.

Failure to hand over the material, however, could result in the Conservative government being found in contempt of Parliament and could see the Commons asking police to step in and obtain the information that has now been formally ordered released.

Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff's motion was also supported by the New Democrats and the Bloc Québécois.

The government fought hard Thursday against the release of information, arguing the Taliban would profit from the data.

Ignatieff said such arguments were "ridiculous."

Vehicle may hold key to fatal hit-and-run

TRACEY TONG
tracy.tong@metronews.ca

HELP Police have released photographs of a vehicle of interest in hopes the public can assist in an investigation into a fatal hit-and-run collision last month.

At 4:15 p.m. Nov. 27, a motorcycle and a car collided in the area of Richmond Road and High Street. The 44-year-old driver of the motorcycle was pronounced dead at hospital.

Ottawa police said Thursday they have obtained surveillance footage from a nearby residential unit, and collision investigators believe the footage shows a vehicle of interest.

Police said they are interested in speaking with the owner or driver of this vehicle as they may have valuable information relating to this incident.

The vehicle is described as light silver or grey, with four doors, believed to be an Acura 3.2 TL. The vehicle may have dents or damage in the area of the lower-right side passenger doors.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 613-233-8477 (TIPS).

Police warn of scam targeting seniors

Ottawa seniors are among those targeted in an ongoing scam, city police said Thursday. Police said the scam involves someone contacting an older person and pretending to be a grandchild in trouble with the police. The victim is asked to use a money wire service to send several thousand dollars for bail. While this scam has targeted people from the U.S. in the past, it appears to have recently found victims in the Ottawa area, said Ottawa police Staff Sgt. Richard Dugal.

City's LRT plan on track

Land buying, environmental assessment next

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

The city can begin buying property for its light rail rapid transit line as early as January.

The majority of the $2.1-billion, 12.5-kilometre electric light rail line from Tunney's Pasture to Blair Station will follow or run beneath the Transitway.

The city will have to acquire land around some transit stations in order to build. While the land around the stations is federally owned parkland, the maintenance yard near St. Laurent is privately owned industrial space.

If city council approves the planning and environmental assessment study, which was released Thursday, a six-month expedited environmental assessment would begin almost immediately.

Actual construction on the project is still a few years away. Deputy city manager Nancy Schepers said they are not expecting to break ground on a tunnel until late in 2012 or even 2013.

There were arguments that the first line should end at Bayview, since there are still questions about whether the National Capital Commission would allow the city to run tracks down the Western River Parkway.

Local MMA takes charity fight to Que.

FUNDRAISER Canadian Forces soldiers can fight for our country in Afghanistan, but local mixed martial artists who want to fight for our soldiers have to do it in Quebec.

On Saturday, Ottawa-based Wreck MMA will be holding their first event, a 12-fight extravaganza called Fight for the Troops, at the Robert Guertin Arena in Gatineau.

A portion of the proceeds from the event — up to $10,000, according to Wreck MMA president Nick Castiglia — will benefit Soldier On, a charity that helps injured Canadian Forces personnel remain functional and independent.

"We have people over in Afghanistan fighting for our country," said Castiglia.

$50K reward off for homicide case

The Royal Newfoundland Constabulary is offering a $50,000 reward for information about a human skull that was found near St. John's in 2001 that they believe is from a homicide victim. Police released this reconstruction of a man, pictured, they believed died in Newfoundland and Labrador in the late 1990s. Top court to hear case on Air India legal bills

B.C. says acquitted man owes millions

The legal tussle over a multimillion-dollar legal bill between the B.C. government and a man acquitted in the Air India bombings is headed for Canada's highest court.

The Supreme Court of Canada said Thursday it will hear an appeal by the province over documents it seized in connection with the assets and liabilities of Ripudaman Singh Malik.

In March 2005, a B.C. Supreme Court judge acquitted Malik and co-accused Ajaib Singh Bagri in the 1985 bombings of two separate Air India flights that killed a total of 331 people.

Ripudaman Singh Malik

Prior to the start of the trial in 2003, the B.C. government signed an agreement with the millionaire businessman to pay the costs of his defence team up front. Malik was to repay the government the liabilities of his 11-member team. He hasn't, despite government demands dating back to December 2005. Malik is suing the Crown for malicious prosecution, and launched legal action in 2007 arguing that he shouldn't have to pay if his allegations prove true in court. He also claimed the deal he made with the province to repay his legal fees was made under duress. THE CANADIAN PRESS

No Greenpeace tees in Parliament

Greenpeace T-shirts have been banned from Parliament after the organization staged an illegal demonstration on the Hill this week.

The ban is due to "recent events," a security guard told a reporter from The Canadian Press who entered the Parliament buildings as a visitor Thursday wearing a Greenpeace T-shirt.

The reporter put on the Environmental protest

About 20 Greenpeace activists were arrested Monday after scaling the roof of the Parliament buildings and unfurl-ing a sign attacking Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff for their environmental positions.

shirt to confirm reports that security was searching visitors for Greenpeace logos.

The T-shirt was brought to the attention of nearby officers who told the reporter she could not enter the buildings. They relented after she agreed to turn the T-shirt inside-out.

A House of Commons security guard then issued a stern warning: "We won't tolerate anything. We will charge you."

The protest embarrassed RCMP and other security officials on Parliament Hill.

Heather Bradley, a spokesperson for the Speaker's office, said it is routine for guests to be obliged to remove attire that may "disrupt" proceedings.

"When someone is invited in as a member of the public in either the chamber or a committee, they're invited in as an observer, that's it," she said. "They're not a participant, they're an observer."

Bradley offered the example of several visitors who were recently asked to remove anti-abortion pins before entering the public gallery.

Don't Let Dental Problems Spoil Your Xmas Holidays!

Knowing how to handle a dental emergency can sometimes mean the difference between a happy and unhappy holiday travel experience.

Whether you're headed for a Christmas holiday, winter cruise, a cottage weekend, or just enjoying the great Ontario outdoors, it's smart to be prepared for any kind of dental emergency.

It's not a good idea to embark on holiday travel immediately after significant dental work has been done. A quick pre-vacation visit to our office may be a good idea, especially if your travels take you to a remote or foreign destination. When traveling far from home, avoid sticky and hard exotic foods that you are not used to eating. Many dental emergencies are due to lost fillings, broken teeth or ill-fitting dentures.

Consider assembling an inexpensive dental kit to take with you on your holiday travels. Dental cement compounds are available to replace a filling temporarily. Orthodontic wax protects sharp edges, especially on braces. A pair of tweezers, a small mirror, some sterile cotton, and (if applicable) a denture repair kit with adhesive may also come in handy. Most of all, don't forget the toothbrush, fluoride toothpaste and floss.

If a tooth has been broken as a result of an accident or injury,

Dr. David J. Halpin

5,000 in a power play

New Brunswickers blast the sale of utility

Thousands of New Brunswickers are opposed to the sale of NB Power.

New Brunswick's Conservative Opposition has presented the provincial government with petitions signed by more than 5,000 people who are opposed.

Tory Leader David Alward says some of the petitions say no to the sale.

Others, Alward said, call on the Liberal government to hold a referendum or wait for the next election before finalizing the deal.

The petitions have been tabled in the legislature and Alward says more petitions are coming.

Energy Minister Jack

Anatomy of a sale

- Under the proposed deal, Hydro-Québec would get all the major assets of NB Power, including transmission lines and the Point Lepreau nuclear power station, for $4.75 billion — equal to NB Power's debt.
- Residential rates would also be frozen for five years and industrial customers would see an immediate 30 per cent cut in rates, with the savings expected to equal about $5 billion.

- Unions in New Brunswick are worried about the impact on jobs when coal-fired plants in Dalhousie, Courtenay Bay and Grand Lake are decommissioned.

Keir says he's not upset with the petitions because it is democracy at work.

He says there are still a lot of people who don't understand the benefits of the deal.

Under the deal, Hydro-Québec would buy the major assets of NB Power for almost $4.8 billion and provide more than $5 billion in rate cuts over five years. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hospitals wage war on lethal killer

DEATH A lethal condition is killing more than 9,300 people each year.

It's sepsis, a serious body-wide response to infection that patients often acquire while being treated in hospital.

A report released Thursday by the Canadian Institute for Health Information provides a pan-Canadian snapshot of sepsis, one of the top causes of death in hospitals, said Indra Pulcins, a director.

"One in three patients with sepsis in Canada will end up dying from it — so it's about 30 per cent," Pulcins said.

"Just to put this in context, the mortality rate for stroke was about one in five patients would die, for heart attacks, one in 10 patients would die."

57 held in Philippines

Militiamen demand murder, banditry charges dropped

Government-armed former militiamen wanted for murder and banditry took more than 70 villagers and children hostage Thursday from a southern Philippines village, demanding charges be dropped against them before they would free the captives.

The abductions raised fresh questions over the government's long-standing policy of arming civilian volunteers to protect against insurgencies. Just the day before, 100 other militiamen in the south were accused of slaughtering civilians in the country's worst political massacre.

Hours after the kidnapping Thursday, the gunmen freed the 17 children they held after talking with a government negotiator. They continued to hold 57 hostages, mostly women.

For decades, the Philippine government has armed civilian volunteers — often poorly trained and ill-disciplined — as a back-up security force in areas with communist or Muslim insurgencies.

At least 100 government militiamen are among 161 suspects in last month's massacre of 57 people in an election convoy in Maguindanao province, on the opposite western side of volatile Mindanao Island. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Humbled and hawkish, Obama accepts Nobel Peace Prize

NORWAY U.S. President Barack Obama accepted the Nobel Peace Prize on Thursday in Oslo with a striking defence of war, saying that evil must be vigorously opposed even as he made an impassioned case for building a "just and lasting peace."

Pronouncing himself humbled by such an honour so early in "my labours on the world stage," Obama nevertheless turned his Nobel moment into an unapologetic defence of

Busy man

• U.S. President Barack Obama's decision to break with tradition and not follow the lead of past Nobel Peace Prize winners bewildered some Norwegians. Others thought he was being impolite, as he skipped out on a host of activities, including Friday's Nobel Concert. Obama blamed his schedule.

armed intervention in times of self defence or moral necessity. It was a jarring moment when Obama, in the midst of the ceremony, said of U.S. troops in Afghanistan: "Some will kill. Some will be killed."

He lauded previous Nobel winner Martin Luther King Jr., as a preacher of nonviolent action. But he added, "A nonviolent movement could not have halted Hitler's armies. Negotiations cannot convince al-Qaida's leaders to lay down their arms."

He drew laughter when he acknowledged "the considerable controversy that your generous decision has generated."

Emails fuelling skeptics

Go Green

At a critical time, the uproar over stolen emails suggesting scientists suppressed contrary views about climate change has emboldened skeptics — including U.S. congressional Republicans
looking to scuttle
President Barack Obama's push for mandatory reductions in greenhouse gases.

The email brouhaha, dubbed "Climategate" by doubters, comes as U.S. delegates to the international climate conference in Copenhagen are trying to convince the world the United States is determined to move aggressively to rein in heat-trapping pollution.

To counter the delegates, a group of Republican lawmakers is going to Copenhagen to argue against mandatory greenhouse gas reductions.

The climate skeptics gained political momentum when former Republican vice-presidential candidate Sarah Palin said Obama should boycott the negotiations in Denmark and "not be a party to fraudulent scientific practices" — a clear reference to the purloined emails from computers belonging to scientists at a British climate research centre.

Obama is going anyway. Former vice-president Al Gore, the most recognized U.S. voice on climate change, quickly rebutted Palin and accused the climate deniers in an interview with CNN television of "taking things out of context and misrepresenting" what the emails actually said.

That has not stopped Republican members of Congress, two dozen of whom are writing a letter to United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon demanding that he investigate the emails. Republican lawmakers say they will loudly and often raise questions about what they consider a corruption of climate science at the Denmark conference, where delegates from 192 nations are trying to forge a climate agreement.

'Deep' evidence

• More than 1,700 scientists in the U.K. have signed a statement to defend the "deep and extensive" evidence that climate change is real and is the result of human activity.

It all began when hackers broke into a computer system belonging to a climate research centre at Britain's University of East Anglia, stole several thousand emails spanning a decade between some of the world's leading climate scientists, and three weeks ago put some of the spiciest ones on the Internet. One referred to using a "trick" that could be used to "hide the decline" of temperatures.

News in brief

U.S. A bill to protect reporters' confidential sources in U.S. federal court cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday. The bill does not give journalists absolute authority to protect sources, that can be overridden in national security cases. The legislation has broad support from media organizations. Conservatives and some in the intelligence community believe it can harm attempts to track classified information leaks.

BRITAIN H1N1 flu is far less dangerous than originally feared, British officials said Thursday — about 100 times less lethal than the 1918 Spanish flu. To determine how deadly the virus is, the British health department tracked all reported swine flu patients hospitalized between July and November. In a paper published online in the British journal BMJ, experts estimated that out of every 100,000 infected people in Britain, about 26 died. That is about 100 times less deadly than the devastating 1918 Spanish flu, which killed at least 50 million people worldwide.

TURKEY A methane gas explosion ripped through a coal mine in western Turkey on Thursday, trapping about 15 miners, a local official said. Mayor Sadi Kurtulan of the town of Mustafakemalpasas said about 15 miners were trapped after the blast caused a shaft to collapse at the mine. Around five workers were pulled out and hospitalized, he said.

U.S. men sought to join jihadist groups

Five young American Muslims arrested in Pakistan met with representatives of a group linked to al-Qaida and asked for training, but were turned down because they didn't have "references" from trusted militants, a Pakistani security official said Thursday.

Another senior officer said the five men sought to fight jihad, or holy war, in northwestern Pakistan and to battle American troops in Afghanistan.

The case is another worrisome sign that Americans may be susceptible to terrorist recruitment from within the U.S. It comes after charges against a Chicago man accused of plotting international terrorism.

U.S. officials in Pakistan have now visited the men in custody. Their disappearance from the area of Washington, D.C., late last month (one of them left a militaristic farewell video, saying Muslims must be defended) prompted a frantic search by friends and family, and an investigation by worried counterterrorism officials.

Javed Islam, a regional police chief in Pakistan, said the men met with a banned organization, Jaish-e-Mohammed in Hyderabad, and with representatives of a related group, Jamat-ud-Dawa, in Lahore. Those groups turned down their requests. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ousted Honduran president and coup leaders at stalemate

POWER PLAY Honduras's coup-installed government says ousted leader Manuel Zelaya is free to leave the country, but there's a catch: He can't leave as president, and he says he won't go as anything else.

And so Zelaya remained holed up Thursday in the Brazilian Embassy in Tegucigalpa, the capital. If he sets foot outside the building, the leaders who ousted him have vowed to arrest him on charges of treason and abuse of power.

They appeared to be softening their stance on Wednesday, when they first responded positively to a Mexican request seeking guarantees of Zelaya's safe exit from the country.

Mexico sent a plane for Zelaya, but the government quickly said he could leave only as a private citizen requesting asylum. He would be forced to concede his claim to the presidency. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The burning question of bilingualism

UrbanCompass

Steve Collins

metronews.ca/collins

Waterloo fire Chief John deHooge, who takes over the Ottawa Fire Service in January, got a foretaste of local politics this week as city council went behind closed doors to argue about language.

DeHooge, a 30-year veteran who beat 317 other candidates from across the country for the job, doesn't speak French.

It's normal to exclude the public from discussions involving personnel matters, and probably just as well in this case, as the reportedly heated argument was likely not one of council's finer moments.

But we're not in Waterloo anymore, chief. As the capital of a bilingual nation, Ottawa has special responsibilities and, appropriately, policies to ensure employees can serve the public in either language. There's a point, however, where principle should take a back seat to practicality.

At the federal level, there's been some soul-searching about civil servants taking courses that simply prepare them to pass tests and get their certification rather than actually acquire any working knowledge of another language. Once the test is over, the new language skills often disappear because they aren't used anyway.

Official Languages commissioner Graham Fraser recently questioned the wisdom of sinking such massive amounts of time and money into sending middle-aged managers on perpetual French courses.

DeHooge, for his part, has promised to take French lessons. The catch is, that's all he has to do. There's no deadline, and no requirement that he actually learn French, or even get better at it. It's lip service to a policy that, applied without common sense, can result in ludicrous decisions.

For example, take the case of Jeanne Barr, the postmistress in Pakenham, notified by Canada Post she was out of a job because she doesn't speak French. Of course, neither does Pakenham, but try telling that to Canada Post and the Official Languages Act.

City councillors Georges Bedard and Jacques Legendre, who were only doing their jobs in questioning the hiring of a unilingual fire chief, want the city's language policy tightened so that in the future anyone in such a senior position would have to be bilingual.

Of the six contenders actually interviewed for the job, two were bilingual, but neither had experience running a large urban fire department. I can't help but worry that if the city's policy had been to Bedard's and Legendre's liking, the job would have gone to one of these less-qualified candidates, with language trumping actual experience and ability on the job.

If our Toronto-born chief can learn to parlez-vous a little, great, but I hope he'll concentrate on firefighting.

Not such a rosy picture for aboriginals

Bernd Christmas

Poverty is a fact of life facing many Aboriginal Peoples in Canada.

The UN recently ranked Canada fourth on its quality of life ranking and paints a rosy picture. Officially called the Human Development Index, it measures certain criteria to get a snapshot of a country's quality of life.

Let's look at this from the perspective of the aboriginal community in Canada. Statistics show the aboriginal infant mortality rate is 1½ times higher than the Canadian infant mortality rate. An aboriginal man will die 7.4 years earlier than a non-aboriginal Canadian. An aboriginal woman will die 5.2 years earlier than her non-aboriginal counterpart.

Unbelievably, 70 per cent of aboriginal students on-reserve will never complete high school. Graduation rates for the on-reserve population range from 28.9 to 32.1 per cent annually. About 27 per cent of the aboriginal population between 15 and 44 years of age hold a post-secondary certificate, diploma, or degree, compared with 46 per cent of the Canadian population within the same age group.

On economic terms, unemployment rates for all aboriginal groups continue to be at least double the rate of the non-aboriginal population. Aboriginal persons living in a family setting are about three times more likely to have incomes below the poverty level than is the case for other Canadians. About 80 per cent have incomes below $30,000 per year.

Statistics on the health of Aboriginal Peoples is grim. The suicide rate is more than twice the Canadian rate and is now among the leading causes of death among aboriginal youth between the ages of 10 and 24, with the rate estimated to be five to six times higher than that of non-aboriginal youth. Diabetes is at least three times the national average.

It's wonderful that Canada is held in such high regard by others, but once you start to peel back the layers, an uglier picture emerges ... Aboriginal Peoples' poverty.

Stability threatened: Bank

Review finds conditions improved, but debt poses risk

Mounting governmental and household debt are posing new risks to the stability of financial systems, the Bank of Canada said Thursday in its most recent analysis.

The central bank's semi-annual "Financial System Review" finds that overall conditions have improved in the short term since it last reported in June.

But it adds that record-high debt by Canadian households pose an elevated medium-term risk if a

Review

The Bank of Canada notes that its review of potential risks is not intended as a prediction of what is likely to occur, but an early warning system of potential risks.

second financial or economic shock were to materialize.

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney has warned in the past about Canadians getting in over their heads with large mortgage commitments that don't appear problematic given today's low interest rates.

The bank repeats the warning in its systems review, stressing that rates aren't going to remain at historic lows forever and mortgage payments will rise.

This is both a potential problem for households and banks, the report states.

"When borrowing funds, especially in the form of mortgages, households need to assess their ability to service these debt obligations over their entire maturity, taking into account likely changes in both income and interest rates," the report stresses.

And the bank says lenders should be careful about extending mortgage loans even if they are insured.

REVENUE Lululemon Athletica Inc. is at peace with its optimistic outlook for the holiday shopping season, following a 30 per cent revenue spike this fall as cash-strapped consumers continued to scoop up its pricey yoga wear.

The Vancouver-based maker of the uber trendy activewear reported Wednesday a profit of $14.1 million or 20 cents a diluted share in the quarter ended Nov. 1 — up from year-earlier net income of $8.8 million, or 13 cents per diluted share.

Revenue increased 29.7 per cent to $112.9 million from $87 million in the same 2008 quarter, while comparable-store sales increased by 10 per cent.

"(We) are very pleased to deliver these results in a challenging retail environment," said CEO Christine Day on a conference call to investors Wednesday.

"Sales momentum continued to build in the third quarter as consumers responded to our distinctive."

Senators 2 Flyers 0

Brian Elliott made 23 saves in his second NHL shutout and Nick Foligno and Jesse Winchester scored to give the Ottawa Senators a 2-0 victory over the slumping Philadelphia Flyers on Thursday night.

With 9:30 minutes left to play, Foligno took a wrist shot from just above the circle and then put his rebound past diving goalie Brian Boucher, who had smothered another drive by Foligno a few minutes earlier.

Winchester sealed the victory with a short-handed, empty-net goal in the final minute.

It was the first shutout this season for the Senators, who have two wins in their past six games.

The Flyers were blanked for the third time in six games. They are 1-3 under new coach Peter Laviolette, who replaced the fired John Stevens a week ago after Philadelphia's two consecutive shutout losses.

Philadelphia, which lost six of seven before the coaching change, has scored only 11 goals in seven games.

What's in a flag-bearer?

FieldofPlay

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

And so the speculation begins. Who will carry the Maple Leaf into the stadium when the Olympics open in Vancouver? This question preoccupies the musings of many Canadians every time the Games roll around because the subject of who will carry our flag prompts vastly different responses, all of which are laced with tremendous passion. The stakes are even higher because these are our home Olympics.

Some feel that the right and privilege of carrying the flag is an opportunity not to be denied — not even if the task interferes with preparation for imminent competition. Stellar athletes who declined for such reasons in 2006 at Torino were, at times, publicly ridiculed and found themselves having to defend their choices.

There are many characteristics necessary in a flag-bearer. Not only does the athlete have to be of substance on the field of play, he or she has to represent the goodness of Canada. In addition, this country aims to reflect its diversity in the person who bears the standard. Therefore, linguistic, racial and gender equality issues are considered.

Strangely, in a country in love with hockey, our greatest male players who will garner much of the nation's attention are deemed by many to be ineligible because they are professionals — sort of like invited guests at the Games.

It's too bad because the charitable Jarome Iginla, a veteran of three Olympics who scored twice in the gold-medal game in Salt Lake City, might be a great choice. So would Martin Brodeur, the most prolific goalie of all time who will take part in his fourth Olympics.

No, it seems Canada's flag-bearer must be an Olympian first and foremost. The job has to go to someone who has lived the Olympic life.

Without naming names, there are so many fine Canadians to assume this position. By now we should all know who they are because when the time comes they will be representing all of us.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

Metro Readers Make Us Blush.

Blush because we are flattered and honoured to be selected as Ottawa's Best Builder by Metro readers.

It has always been our goal to offer a truly satisfying experience for all our homeowners from the very moment they decide on a Mattamy home to the very moment they open the front door for the very first time.

In our Ottawa communities of Fairwinds in Kanata and Half Moon Bay in Barrhaven, we want every family to feel proud of where they live. We want people to enjoy the feel and features of our communities which is why we build fewer homes per street, offer such a nice variety of exterior designs, and many spaces and places in the community that can be shared by neighbours.

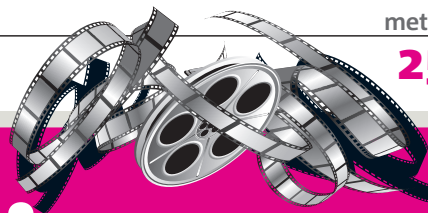

This truly is a very nice gift.
Even though it makes us blush.
With pride.

Thank you.

Cameron crunch time

Will Avatar's huge budget and hype sink it?

Movie feature

A colossal budget, visionary technology and a down-to-the-wire workload on a film whose fortunes are a real question mark.

James Cameron has been here before on little ditties called Terminator 2: Judgment Day and Titanic. In case anyone's forgotten how that worked out for him, Titanic stacked up 11 Academy Awards, best picture and director among them, and a record $1.8 billion worldwide at the box office.

This time, the Ontario-born filmmaker's vision is riding on Avatar, a science-fiction epic aiming to push the bounds of digital filmmaking and 3-D presentation into the heavens, with a reported price tag well in excess of the $200 million

On the web

• For movie photos, trailers and screen times — or to buy tickets — visit metronews.ca/movies.

spent to make Titanic.

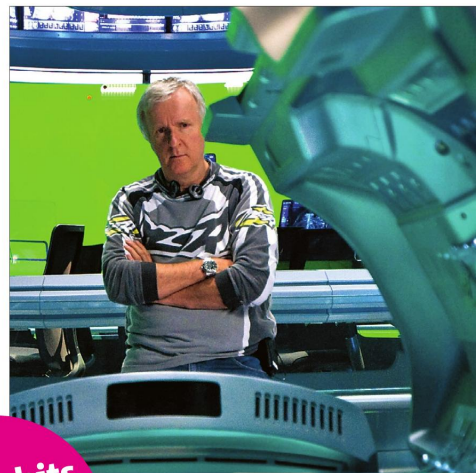

Will audiences come along? Cameron thinks so. "It's hard for me to imagine that short of some massive marketing debacle, that it's not going to work for people. I mean, we may not have a kind of slam-dunk opening weekend that settles the whole case. I don't think the case is going to be settled until week two or maybe week three," Cameron said only days after completing Avatar, just in time for its worldwide blowout next week.

"Let's face it. It wasn't settled on Titanic till week 10. Titanic was the No. 1 picture for 16 weeks. I don't expect that kind of performance out of Avatar."

Cameron will not divulge what he does expect out of Avatar, wisecracking that if we announce the sequel, then we hit the number.

Cameron's reputation and a mammoth marketing

Ontario-born director James Cameron has plenty riding on his new sci-fi epic Avatar.

Avatar hits theatres next week push by distributor 20th Century Fox virtually guarantee hit status for Avatar.

Still, in this blockbuster age, there are hits and there are HITS.

The question is whether Avatar can climb to the $300 million or $400 million level of such franchises as Star Wars, The Lord of the Rings and Spider-Man.

Some factors in its favour: Science-fiction and fantasy have gone mainstream in a huge way since Cameron's last foray in the field.

Cameron's a franchise unto himself even when he doesn't score a runaway hit (The Abyss).

Frog timeless tale

The Princess and The Frog

Director: John Lasseter

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

It took nearly 15 years and several misfires for Disney to realize what made their animated movie musicals special, but luckily they did, as The Princess and The Frog proves. The ironic part was that it took CGI king John Lasseter to champion a return to the animation studio's roots.

In The Princess and the Frog, there's no winking irony, no out-of-place pop culture references and no rapping grannies.

What's there instead is a beautifully inventive take on a classic fairy tale full of music that pays homage to the film's New Orleans setting while still fitting in the classic Disney vein. The fact that Randy Newman wrote the songs but opted not to sing them himself probably helps a great deal.

Disney returns to its roots with The Princess and The Frog.

The animation featured is a return to form for Disney, making the film feel timeless right out of the gate. The elephant in the room — that the film features Disney's first African-American princess — becomes a non-issue so quickly it's ridiculous.

A lot of that probably has to do with the fact that our heroine, Tiana, spends much of the movie as a frog herself, but every aspect of the story is handled so artfully that anyone attempting to ascribe political meaning to anything in it would only make themselves seem foolish.

FEATURE "You could say it was love at first sight."

That's how filmmaker Nati Baratz describes his first meeting with Tibetan monk Tenzin Zopa, the subject of his new documentary Unmistaken Child — opening next week. The film chronicles Tenzin's quest to find the young reincarnation of his life-long master Lama Konchog.

But this was not the film Baratz intended to make when he set out for Asia. Originally, he wanted to document a group of orthodox Jews search for a hidden Jewish-Tibetan tribe.

He met Tenzin while in Nepal, researching his movie and attending classes at a Tibetan Buddhist monastery. He was there to speak about his life and his master who had just died. Baratz says he realized, "this is the movie I want to make."

But it took months for both Tenzin and the Tibetan monks Baratz their permission to make the film. "It was a long process," says Baratz.

A vibrant red Chevrolet Silverado 2500LT is shown from a rear three-quarter view, driving through a muddy, rocky terrain. The truck is splashing mud, and its tires are covered in it. The background features a dramatic landscape with snow-capped mountains, a rainbow arching across the sky, and a small snowflake icon in the upper left corner. The truck's body has 'SILVERADO' and '2500LT' badges, and the Chevrolet bowtie logo is on the tailgate. The license plate area displays '271'.

Invictus stars on top of their game

Invictus

Director: Clint Eastwood

Stars: Matt Damon, Morgan Freeman

Classification: PG

Rating: ★★★★★

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

The main joy of Invictus is watching Morgan Freeman finally, at long last, play Nelson Mandela, a role it was assumed would eventually end up on his resume.

But instead of a long-planned adaptation of Mandela's autobiography, director Clint Eastwood has brought to the screen the story of 1995 Rugby World Cup, held in South Africa, and Mandela's effort to use the event to unite an apartheid-scarred nation.

That Freeman excels as Mandela is really no surprise, but it is fun to watch. The real surprise here is Matt Damon, as rugby captain Francois Pienaar, who turns in a startlingly effective performance.

Good as the leads are, the rugby itself unfortunately gets in the way. As the sport is more than likely a bit unfamiliar to North American audiences, much effort is made to explain the basics of the game.

Some of these are seamless within the story, such as actual coaching sessions the team held in the townships as an outreach effort. Others, such as one security guard asking another straight-forward questions about scoring and game-play, feel far too clumsy — especially in a film that handles so many other complex story aspects so artfully.

The big final match against New Zealand, the film's climax, is played out almost in real time, point by point, leaving Mandela a spectator in his own story as Pienaar's men take the field and wordlessly fight for their nation's honour.

Aside from taking up way too much of the film's time, the game also suffers from too much slow motion, which is what ultimately keeps the film from being a true success. Whether the audience knows the outcome of the famous game or not, the filmmakers take so long getting to the final whistle that it's hard to care when they do.

Me and Orson Welles

Director: Richard Linklater

Stars: Zac Efron, Christian Mackay, Claire Danes

Classification: STC

Rating: ●●●●

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Sometimes one performance can save an entire film. Take Me And Orson Welles, a fairly bland coming age story set against the backdrop of Orson Welles' infamous 1937 production of Julius Caesar.

The movie is featherweight and predictable, but bursts to life every time Christian Mackay appears on screen as Orson Welles.

Mackay's performance transcends impersonation to completely capture the complex personality of a young Welles at the peak of his powers and director Richard Linklater (Waking Life) is clever enough to shade in all of Welles' flaws just as carefully as his prestigious talents. It's easily the best representation of Welles ever captured on screen, but unfortunately the film that surrounds the towering performance doesn't quite compare.

The main problem with the movie is that it centres on Teen Beat coverboy Zac Efron rather than Welles.

The High School: The Musical star plays an ambitious teen who stumbles into a small role in Caesar. Much of the film is about Efron learning hard life lessons from Welles, the cast, and a promiscuous production assistant played by Claire Danes.

Efron's limited range as an actor is stretched to the breaking point in a pretty undemanding role. The script does capture the youthful joy of being involved with the arts reasonably well, but without Orson Welles this would have been a made-for-TV movie at best.

Fortunately Richard Linklater rushes through the plot to spend as much time as possible with McKay's Welles, vividly recreating his expressionistic take on Julius Caesar and filling every scene with subtle details about Welles' early life (such as his use of off-duty ambulances to race around New York).

It's unfortunate that the director didn't just make a film about this era of Welles' life with Christian McKay as the star, because it could have been an interesting bio-pic.

As it stands, Me And Orson Welles is merely a pleasant movie featuring one astounding performance destined for awards recognition.

Victoria by Vallee

C.R.A.Z.Y. director tackles Brit royalty

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

When he was attending this year's Toronto International Film Festival with his film, The Young Victoria — an intimate account of the iconic British monarch's early years on the throne — Jean Marc Vallee's hair was considerably shorter than it was when he was in Toronto for his Genie-winning C.R.A.Z.Y.

This tonsorial disparity speaks to the differences between the two films: Where C.R.A.Z.Y.'s amped-up autobiographical narrative gave the Montreal-based filmmaker licence to let it all hang out, The Young Victoria's subject matter called for a more pared-down approach.

"Normally, period pieces are not my cup of tea," explains Vallee, who took several years to decide how to follow up the critical and commercial success of C.R.A.Z.Y.

"But Julian Fellowes' script was beautiful: He has such a rare way of writing about this world. I felt like I could spend the next two years of my life trying to get it onscreen."

Vallee admits that The Young Victoria, which hits theatres next week, is a less personal project than C.R.A.Z.Y., and that he struggled for a while with striking a balance between individual vision and the demands of the costume-drama genre.

"On the credits, it doesn't say (that this is) 'a film by (Jean-Marc Vallee)' ... it says 'directed by.' What I mean is that I'm not the only one making creative decisions."

This is not to suggest, however, that The Young Victoria lacks any continuity with C.R.A.Z.Y.: While their protagonists are several centuries apart, both films deal with adolescent frustration.

"The story takes place a long time ago, and from research, we have some idea of how these people behaved," says Vallee. "But there's nothing about how people were behind closed doors. So in the film, when our Victoria forgets her etiquette — when she stands or sits in a certain way, or addresses somebody in an inappropriate manner — it's not because we're trying to relate to a modern audience. It's because it really might have happened that way in private!"

An Investigational Oral Contraceptive Pill Clinical Research Study

Many women who take the birth control pill have pelvic pain, cramping, or headaches during the hormone-free interval (the week off the pill when they either take sugar pills or no pill at all). They may also have breast tenderness, nausea, vomiting, heavy bleeding, bloating, or swelling.

A new birth control method has been developed in an investigational study and is currently being evaluated in a worldwide research study. This investigational drug may reduce the amount of pelvic pain or headaches women have during the hormone-free interval compared to other birth control pills.

You may qualify to take part in this study if:

- You are between 18 and 50 years old
- You are currently taking a monthly birth control pill
- You have pelvic pain/cramping or headaches during your week off the pill

Playing Mandela

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

Morgan Freeman has played real life characters before on screen, most notably in Lean on Me, but with his latest role he takes on one of the most venerated people in the world, Nelson Mandela.

"This started out with Madiba (honorary title adopted by elders of Mandela's clan) naming me as his heir apparent," says Freeman. "When he was asked... 'Mr. Mandela, if your book becomes a movie, who would you like to play you?' He said, 'Morgan Freeman.'"

That was fourteen years ago. It took Freeman that amount of time to find and develop Invictus, this week-end's look at Mandela's plan to use a rugby team as a symbol of South African unity, into a film directed by Clint Eastwood. Freeman used that time to prepare, getting to know the real Mandela.

Freeman may be the latest to play Mandela on screen, but he isn't the first.

The first major dramatization at Mandela's life starred Danny Glover (who won an Emmy for his work) and was made in the 25th year of his 27 year prison sentence. Shot on location in Zimbabwe the made-for-TV Mandela covers the years 1948 to 1987 focusing on not just on Mandela's struggle for freedom but his personal life as well.

"I'm always interested in people who become symbols," said writer Ronald Harwood, "and I'm curious to know what such people are like as ordinary men and women, beneath the trappings we bestow upon them."

Next came Mandela and deKlerk another made-for-television drama starring Sidney Poitier and Michael Caine. The story of how these men engineered the end of apartheid was shot in South Africa on many of the actual locations where the real story took place. Newsreel footage furthers the film's feeling of historical authenticity.

There have been several other dramas based on Mandela's life, including Goodbye Bafana, starring 24's Dennis Haysbert, but to catch a glimpse of the man himself check out Malcolm X.

Just months after his release from prison Mandela played a schoolteacher in a Soweto classroom in the film's final scene, reciting a snippet of one of Malcolm X's most famous speeches.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

Glee-ing up for a new choral conductor

Following in the footsteps of Kristin Chenoweth and Jonathan Groff, Tony winner Idina Menzel is in advanced talks to join the cast of Glee. If the deal goes through, she'll be playing the choir director for New Directions' rivals, Vocal Adrenaline. EW.COM

NEWSCASTER MUSICAL CHAIRS ABC says Chris Cuomo is leaving Good Morning America to co-host the news magazine 20/20. The move paves the way for George Stephanopoulos who may be joining the show. Today is Cuomo's last day on the breakfast television show.

CAT(WOMAN) BURGLAR Prosecutors say they have charged a man suspected of stealing $25,000 in jewelry from Julie Newmar. The actress who portrayed the first Catwoman on the Batman TV series spotted the pilfered jewelry for sale on eBay and alerted authorities.

Taylor Kitsch, Scott Porter and Gaius Charles helped make Friday Night Lights about much more than Texas high school football.

Top ten TV shows

Here is The Canadian Press' list of the top 10 small-screen offerings from the past decade.

ARRESTED DEVELOPMENT (2003-2006) It may be the most successful unsuccessful TV show of the decade; an irreverent, wacky sitcom that thrilled its faithful audience while bewildering countless others with its non-sequitur sense of humour.

BUFFY THE VAMPIRE SLAYER (1997-2003) Before Twilight took a stab at dissecting teen angst with romantic fantasy, this nuanced dramedy sunk its teeth into adolescent pain with a disarming realism that belied its lighthearted, supernatural premise.

FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS (STARTED 2006) Perhaps nowhere did America seem more real in the past decade than in Dillon, Texas, where residents confronted the Iraq war, racism and unemployment as they cheered on their beloved Panthers.

GILMORE GIRLS (2000-2007) No, the breakneck babble shared between every character is not realistic. But Lorelai Gilmore (Lauren Graham) and her daughter, Rory (Alexis Bledel), are such meticulously drawn characters that they feel like old friends.

LOST (STARTED IN 2004) With compelling characters, spellbinding storylines and mythical symbolism about a bunch of plane-crash survivors on a mysterious tropical island, Lost has brilliantly bridged the gap between the genres of sci-fi and big-network drama.

THE OFFICE (U.K.) (2001-2003) Not only hilarious and unnervingly clever, this British breakout reinvented the sitcom on both sides of the pond with its awkward humour and sly, deadpan delivery.

THE SOPRANOS (1999-2007) When creator David Chase introduced mob boss Tony Soprano (James Gandolfini) to the world, he instantly lifted the traditional pop-culture Mafioso image from one-dimensional caricature to a nuanced enigma.

30 ROCK (STARTED IN 2006) With the impossibly clever one-liners and self-referential storylines on 30 Rock, Tina Fey's Liz Lemon has become the decade's Mary Tyler Moore, wowing us with her clever jabs at NBC and pithy pokes at product placement.

VERONICA MARS (2004-2007) The short-lived series was something of a high-school noir, from its masterfully plotted first-season murder whodunit to the way that even its sunny California environs were always shaded in foreboding tones.

THE WIRE (2002-2008) Critics have suggested it's not only the best show of the decade, but TV's best show of all time. The crime drama examined the crooks and cops in crime-plagued Baltimore, giving equal face time to both sides.

Seal's selects for compilation show his range

NED EHRBAR
for Metro World News

Seal is doing his best to battle jet-lag. He's just arrived in California from Australia, winding down a packed press tour to promote his new compilation, Hits, before joining wife Heidi Klum and their four children for the holidays. But he's not complaining.

"I'm not tired," he insists. "Tired is for the weak. I'll just stand for a bit, or else it will all go downhill quite fast."

A retrospective is an odd choice for the British singer, as he's not a big fan of looking back.

"I don't look back at my career and take a trip down memory lane," he says.

"The funny thing is I never listen to any of my own music at home. Heidi has a habit of playing them. When I finished System and the Soul album, she just played them to death. And what I would always do is I'd leave the room."

The one hit in particular gives him the most pause is Kiss From a Rose, the single that catapulted him to fame.

"I can't stand singing it or the most part," he admits.

"It was the one I was most embarrassed by when I wrote it. I just thought it meandered all over the place."

"But then I've come to appreciate it — I haven't really written anything quite like it. And therefore I think it's the one I'm most proud of."

While he's not a fan of looking back on his career — compilation albums not withstanding — Seal is very candid about how his life with Klum has turned out.

"Do we have issues? Of course we have issues. But in the grand scheme of things we don't, not compared to some of the issues."

"I see other families have and other couples have. We don't have a leg to stand on when it comes to complaining," he says. "I've paid my dues. Both Heidi and myself worked our asses off to get here. No one gave it to us."

And Seal isn't shy about speculating as to what's made him so successful — or sharing his opinions on his fellow countrymen.

Second City marks half a century

NED EHRBAR

As many of its illustrious alumni as it can manage will descend on Chicago this weekend to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Second City — the troupe that spawned a classic sketch comedy TV series and launched the careers of countless comedians, from Gilda Radner and Bill Murray to Tina Fey and Steve Carell.

Two of its most famous member, Catharine O'Hara and Eugene Levy, are particularly looking forward to the reunion — and to sharing the stage again.

"I'm much more comfortable with him now than I ever was in the old days," O'Hara admits, as she and Levy have gone on to be mainstays in Christopher Guest's improvisation-inspired films, including Waiting for Guffman, Best in Show and A Mighty Wind, in which they played star-crossed folk singers Mitch Cohen and Mickey Crabbe.

The reunion special also doubles as a benefit for Second City's alumni fund. "They set it up for alumni of Second City who are going through any sort of troubles in their lives and need some financial help," O'Hara explains.

The prospect of reviving favourite characters from the past has its downside, Levy admits.

"We're going to try and bring some of the wigs out of the mothballs," Levy says.

"It's kind of sad in a way, but fun in another — sad to see us now, trying to do the same thing."

This is War is the latest album from 30 Seconds to Mars, which features actor Jared Leto, left.

Leto goes to war

Actor has new album with 30 Second to Mars

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI for Metro Canada"If we're going to make a CD ... we might as well have fun and celebrate the release."

Jared Leto

Jared Leto might be a famous actor and platinum-selling musician, but even he has major record label headaches to deal with. In August last year, EMI sued Leto's band, 30 Seconds to Mars, for breach of contract.

Yet, the band resigned with EMI before releasing their latest disc, This is War. "We want to be treated fairly," Leto tells Metro over the phone from Los Angeles. "We did get to a place where EMI addressed the concerns we were fighting for."

Still, it may seem a bit odd that the group would sign to any big label after all the trouble the majors gave the group. The band does have a massive following, so why not go the Radiohead route? It was something they considered.

"We looked at what other bands did," he says. "But Radiohead is now being distributed through a major. I started looking at the options and the reality is we're in a transition time right now. Being DIY still leaves the band having to do what it really doesn't want to, which is running a record company."

Leaving all the grunt work to EMI allowed the group to try something completely different on their new record. Dubbed The Summit, the group went to several places around the world — including Toronto and Iran — to record fans playing instruments and singing to their new songs; some of these recordings ended up on the release.

"People did everything from percussion to singing to chanting and stomping," Leto explains. "We wanted to turn the audience away from the band and toward our fans around the world."

Working this into their songs wasn't easy. Leto had to plan for these recordings, even though he didn't know how they would turn out, while he was writing the album. "I had to leave space for the Summit in a way you'd map out strings for a record."

The result is a louder, more epic 30 Seconds to Mars. Partly because of the Summit and also thanks to Leto's love of big stadium sounds, This is War is a cross between distorted, grungy rock and arena-ready U2. It's brash and energetic, while Leto's wails pierce through the blistering drums and Edge-like guitar.

There's no doubt the band's fans will enjoy the effort, but just in case they need extra incentive to buy their disc, the group solicited its followers to submit photos for the CDs cover art. The group took the best and printed 2,000 covers.

"We did it to drive the record company crazy," says Leto, laughing. "We all know that most of us, me included, don't buy these very often anymore. If we're going to make a CD and go through the trouble of printing out a piece of plastic and putting songs on it, we might as well have fun and celebrate the release."

John K. Samson stripped away

The Weakerthans frontman goes solo

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada

We know what you're thinking: "John K. Samson ... why does that name ring a bell?"

It shouldn't be a surprise that Samson's name evokes familiarity. He's been around. Punk rockers recall his stint as bassist for Prairie-based political outfit Propagandhi while those who lean towards more radio-friendly music have seen/heard Samson's enticingly soft voice at the helm of indie rockers The Weakerthans for the last 12 years.

Yet when he hits the stage on tour, all of that will be stripped away. Samson is currently performing solo in support of his latest endeavour, an EP entitled City Route 85.

While it's not unheard of for lead singers to venture forth with their own music, Samson's foray features a unique twist. The three-song release is his first in a collection of four efforts dedicated to and inspired by his native Winnipeg's streets. Yep, Samson's writing about life on the road but in a very different way. "Most people wouldn't know it — including most 'Peggys' — but City Route 85 is actually our main street commonly referred to as Portage Avenue," he notes.

He continues on to discuss how such a revelation led to the notion of dedicating a series of EPs to municipal and provincial thoroughfares.

"I'm looking at stretches or segments of highway and how the place affects the people, location, landscape and history," he re-

John Samson's new solo EP City Route 85, is inspired by the streets of his native Winnipeg.

"I like the idea of a focused theme — exploring contemporary small-town life."

John K. Samson

veals, noting a discovery of how arterial access and geography play a key role in a city's evolution. "It's interesting for people to think about these places in different ways. It sounds like a high school assignment but I wanted to do something really stripped-down; a little research project on three or four locations in Manitoba."

Samson's idea is a strange path of its own. Still, the yield in songs such as Grace General, Cruise Night and the title track make it worthwhile. A collection of light and breezy albeit compelling observations related in Samson's inherently delicate, descriptive manner — songs feel more like stories related over a musical backdrop than typical, basic rhyming couplets squished between guitar riffs — City Route 85 is a grandiose experience compacted into less than 10 minutes.

"I like the idea of a focused theme — exploring contemporary small-town life," he beams before admitting the concept still has a lot more, er, road to travel. "So far, it's only a project I work on when I have the time. I have the next one sketched out. It's about a main street North of Winnipeg. It'll have a name and number but the locals know it as Main Street. One set will be north of Winnipeg, one south and ... I don't know about the other one yet."

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

This is the time of year — and the time of decade (more on that next week) — to make lists. I like lists. They make life so much more orderly. Here's my top ten albums of 2009 in order of release date.

To Lose My Life, White Lies (Released Jan. 12): How can a bunch of guys barely into their twenties already sound so world-weary? Smooth, accomplished and very mature. I knew this was going to be on my best-of list the first time I heard it.

Ruins of Berlin, Dex Romweber Duo (Feb. 10): Some of the scariest psy-

chobilly I've ever heard. Check out Dex's sister wailing on The Wind Did Move.

Primary Colours, The Horrors (May 5): Primary colours? The only colour that matters here is black — and that'll have to do until something darker comes along. If you're hoping for a shoegazer revival, it might have started here.

Vekativest, Grizzly Bear, (May 26): The hipster bloggers got this one right. Hugely ambitious and challenging yet understandable and accessible. Can't wait for the next album.

Lungs, Florence + The Machine (July 7): Florence Welch looks like she stepped out of a Renaissance painting (and with good reason — she comes from a long line of art historians). Brilliant, bewitching, beguiling and wonderfully quirky. Kate Bush/Tori Amos fans take note.

Horehound, Dead Weather (July 14): I can just hear the voicemail from Jack White's wife: "Honey? Can you take a break and maybe come home so you can learn the names of your children?"

Backspacer, Pearl Jam (Sept. 22): Eddie and the guys get back to basics with a short, concise and optimistic album that rocks better than anything they've released in years.

Black Gives Way to Blue, Alice in Chains (Sept. 29): Against the odds, they pull it off with a new singer. Dark, muscular and complex, it's a reminder of AIC's original potential. There may yet be a second act for these guys.

Landing, Githead (Nov. 10): Surely the greatest album of 2009 that no one's heard. Featuring Colin Newman of Wire, the album harkens back to the post-punk art-rock of the late 70s.

Them Crooked Vultures, Them Crooked Vultures (Nov. 17): A supergroup that actually lives up to its promise. Imagine that.

1 Inglourious Basterds

DVD Never mind the critics, the subtitles and Brad Pitt. Quentin Tarantino's gloriously irreverent Second World War epic ups the ante on everything you love about movies — action, drama, suspense, humour, plain badassery, it's all here. And, for the record, it's not Pitt's film. It belongs to one German dude called Christophe Waltz.

4 Dexter Season 4 Finale

TV Kudos to John Lithgow (and the writers) for adding some fresh dramatic blood to this crime series. After a tepid third season, everyone's favourite serial killer (Michael C. Hall as Dexter) met a match in Lithgow's devious Arthur Mitchell. And, if the last few episodes are any indication, the finale will be one big nail biter. Season 4's episode 12 airs Sunday on The Movie Network. Check local listings for times.

6 Spectacle

SERIES The second-season opener of Elvis Costello's music show is quite the spectacle. The British-born, Vancouver resident has locked in Bono and The Edge for the episode, who perform several U2 hits. Spectacle airs today on CTV. Check local listings for times.

7 The Onion Presents Our Front Pages: 1988-2008

BOOK One of the world's funniest "newspapers" compiles its finest cover pages. Sample headlines: Canada signs non-aggression pact with the United States (1990); New Starbucks opens in rest room of existing Starbucks (1998). Enough said.

2 Invictus

FILM When it comes to consistency in Hollywood, Clint Eastwood is as reliable as it gets. In his latest offering, about a game of rugby that united a post-apartheid South Africa, the director seems to have a winner once again. Matt Damon stars but all the buzz is around Morgan Freeman, who plays Nelson Mandela. Mr. Oscar's taking notes.

3 Charlotte Gainsbourg

CELEBRITY Belle de jour? You betcha! French pop icon Serge Gainsbourg's daughter made waves earlier this year for her shocking role in Antichrist — a role that was turned down by bigger names and one that eventually got her the best actress award at Cannes. Now, she's released a hypnotic new album called IRL (MRI in French) in collaboration with Beck. And she doesn't even consider herself an artist.

5 Touch Pets: Dogs

APP Want a virtual woof? There's an app for that. Get your fingertips wagging with a cuddly canine of your choice with this social game. The app uses an energy system. As long as your puppy has been fed and has energy, you collect puppy bucks for participating in training exercises, "career" advancement, play time, and social engagements with other dogs. Metro Recipe of the Day

Creamy Liver with Leeks and Bacon

INGREDIENTS:

6 strips bacon, chopped
1 lb (500 g) calf's liver, thinly sliced
2/3 lb (300 g) baby leeks, sliced diagonally
2 tsp (10 ml) oil, if needed
1 1/3 cups (325 ml) beef stock
2 tbsp (25 ml) balsamic vinegar
4 tbsp (60 ml) heavy cream

METHOD:

1. Heat wide sauté pan and fry bacon over fairly high heat 4-5 minutes or until golden brown. Lift out with slotted spoon.
2. Add liver to pan and fry quickly about 2 minutes per side or until evenly coloured. Remove and keep hot with bacon.

3 Add leeks to pan, with oil if needed, and fry for 30 seconds, stirring. Stir in stock and heat until boiling. Simmer 2-3 minutes or until leeks are just tender.
4 Stir in balsamic vinegar and return liver and pancetta or bacon to pan. Stir in heavy cream. Bring to boil. Adjust seasoning to taste and serve.

MARCH 21-APRIL 20

You will get a huge burst of extra energy today as the Sun makes the best possible angle to your ruler Mars.

LIBRA
SEPT 23-OCT 23

This is the kind of day when you will want to get things done, but because others are not so ambitious you may have to go it alone.

TAURUS
APRIL 21-MAY 21

Family and financial matters will take up most of your time today but if you knuckle down you won't have to worry about them again for quite some time.

SCORPIO
OCT 24-NOV 22

You will find it easy enough to convince people to support you today, even if they don't quite believe that you know what you are doing.

GEMINI
MAY 22-JUNE 21

If there is something you have done that you are less than proud about now is a good time to own up and get it off your conscience.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV 23-DEC 21

Some people seem to be under the impression that you will be there for them every hour and every minute of every day.

CANCER
JUNE 22-JULY 22

Good news is coming your way and it is the kind of news you will want to share, so spend time with friends and family and put work plans on hold.

CAPRICORN
DEC 22-JAN 20

Don't give in too easily today, especially on the work front where colleagues and employers will happily take advantage if you don't stand up for yourself.

LEO
JULY 23-AUG 23

Why is everyone so cautious and fearful? Whatever the reason there is no reason why you should let their negative attitude rub off on you.

AQUARIUS
JAN 21-FEB 18

There is no point dwelling on what might have been and the good news today is that you will be too busy having fun to worry about failures.

VIRGO
AUG 24-SEPT 22

Don't be afraid to take a few chances today and don't be suspicious if someone in a position of power offers you something you have long desired.

PISCES
FEB 19-MARCH 20

Today's cosmic alignment can help you break a habit that once held you up but is now holding you back.
